Technology, Karachi, Pakistan

and

Institute of International Relations, Kazan Federal University, Russian Federation

The Purpose and Foundation of The Conference

As the world experiences profound geopolitical shifts, the relationship between Pakistan and Russia has gained renewed strategic importance. During the Cold War, the two nations maintained limited engagement, with Pakistan closely aligned with the West and Russia associated with India. However, in recent years, both countries have recognized the mutual benefits of enhanced cooperation, especially as the global order transitions towards multipolarity. With the global balance of power continuing to evolve—driven by the rise of new centers of influence and the realignment of traditional alliances—Pakistan and Russia are increasingly finding common ground. Defense cooperation has grown significantly, marked by joint military exercises and defense training programs. In addition, their energy partnership has expanded, with projects like the Pakistan Stream Gas Pipeline exemplifying their deepening economic ties.

The significance of this partnership is further highlighted by their shared regional concerns, including the Afghan peace process, counter-terrorism efforts, and the need for stable regional connectivity. Russia's support for Pakistan's participation in the China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC) and other regional connectivity initiatives underscores the growing interdependence between the two nations as they navigate a complex and shifting global landscape. At a time when the global order is undergoing significant transformation—marked by the emergence of China as a dominant power, the ongoing US-Russia competition, and the realignment of regional alliances—Pakistan and Russia have a unique opportunity to strengthen their cooperation in ways that not only serve their national interests but also contribute to regional peace and stability.

The 1st Pakistani-Russian International Conference aims to create a unique platform for academicians, professionals, policymakers, and students from both countries to critically engage with the evolving bilateral relationship in this changing geopolitical context. Participants will explore the emerging dimensions of Pakistan-Russia relations across a wide range of fields, including defense, energy, trade, regional security, and technological collaboration.

This conference comes at a pivotal time, as both countries are recalibrating their foreign policies to respond to the complexities of the changing global order. By examining how Pakistan and Russia can adapt to these international shifts, the event will provide valuable insights into the future direction of their bilateral ties.

Objectives of the Conference

- To analyze the global changes influencing the growing relations of Pakistan-Russia.
- To examine the impact of expanding defense ties and broader security cooperation between the two nations.
- To study the key energy projects deepening economic ties between Pakistan and Russia.
- To identify areas for further collaboration that can enhance regional peace and stability.

- To find the avenues for trade, transportation, and infrastructure between Russia and Pakistan.
